CERTIFIED ORGANISATIONAL CULTURE CONSULTANT COURSE

Is your organisation in the green or orange?

A research by Institute for Corporate Productivity, shows that a mere 15% of companies declare that they have successfully changed their culture.

In another study by Columbia University of more than 1,300 executives in major firms, "92% said that improving their culture would increase their company's value". Yet "only 16% said that their culture was where it should be".

From Good to Great - Thriving in a Changing World

Let us do a pulse check.

- How is your organisation performing today?
- How future ready is it?
- How resilient is it?
- Is it surviving, basal, good or thriving?

In today's unpredictable and constantly changing environment, creating and sustaining a performing, positive and inclusive culture is the difference between whether a company thrives or lags behind the competition. Organisations have to transform to be resilient and thriving in this world.

Evidence from across the globe have repeatedly demonstrated that positivity strategies and approaches contribute to performing organisations. It is not about happiness or being cheerful but rather using positivity principles and strengths based approaches from research to guide an organisation forward. Employees desire a clear direction for the future and a culture that drives strong engagement and best performance with both tangible and intangible rewards. Yet many culture and change initiatives fail to achieve the desired outcome or impact; wasting precious resources and contributing to further disengagement.

BUILDING INTERNAL CAPACITY TO CREATE PERFORMING, POSITIVE, AND INCLUSIVE CULTURE

Having journeyed with diverse clients from both multinational and small-medium enterprises across the globe, we do understand that culture change can be both daunting and challenging. At the same time, you know as well as we do, that it is a needed accelerant to growth. It is non-negotiable.

This Certified Organisational Culture Consultant (COCC) programme originated from our conversations and work with our clients on how best we could support organisations to co-create waves of successful, positive and sustainable work cultures across the globe.

After much research and analysis, we identified that equipping individuals within an organisation with the philosophy, knowledge, skills, tools and techniques to be able to shift an organizational culture from good to great inside out is the most effective and sustainable approach.

This certification programme integrates fundamentals of change management, architecting culture blueprint and practical applications of organisational wellbeing to provide a good foundation to drive organisational change. By the end of this programme, participants will have the skills and knowledge to intentionally design, develop and implement initiatives to support and further enhance their organisations or clients' organisational culture directives.

MODULE INFORMATION

MODULE 1: FOUNDATIONS OF ORGANISATIONAL CULTURE

Organisational Culture is the DNA of an organisation. It is often defined as the collective behaviour of the members of an organization at its best. And to understand and change it is perhaps the most challenging thing for any one person. The first step towards change is to understand what Organisational Culture is and its levers for change. In this module, learners will learn about concepts, theories, case studies and strategies related to Organisational Culture.

Learning Objectives:

- Learning about the relationship between positive organisational culture and performing organisations
- Understanding what is happening globally and the impact on our organisation's culture and teams
- Understanding the tools needed to build a positive, performing and inclusive culture

MODULE 2: DESIGNING A BUSINESS CULTURE BLUEPRINT

Culture matters - and research proves culture is inextricably linked to organisational performance. Yet for many companies, culture is often left to evolve organically or as an afterthought. The prevailing mindsets seem to be that “we know it is good but we will get it sorted when we have time”, “at least we are not as bad as abc”, “it is only something the big companies can focus on” or “we will do it when we are successful”. Such mindsets have proven to be costly, damaging and toxic for synergy and performance. In this module, learners will grasp the importance of designing a business culture blueprint and be introduced to steps to getting started.

Learning Objectives:

- Understanding the existing culture for clarity on way forward
- Architecting a sustainable approach which is both intentional and integrative for designing a culture blueprint
- Understanding the steps to designing a successful culture blueprint
- Learning how to shatterproof culture change initiatives for continued sustainable success
- Creating culture champions at workplace

Assessments:

- Completion of assignments

MODULE 3: DIVERSITY, EQUITY AND INCLUSION (DEI)

Workplaces are changing rapidly and in ways that are unimaginable in the past. Organisations are realising that a culture which is diverse, equitable and inclusive is the pathway to sustainable performance and to increase overall bottom line. However, the way to bring DEI into your culture is initially like walking on a tightrope, and yet it is possible with the right strategies and innovation. In this module, learners will learn how to create and sustain a culture that is diverse, equitable and inclusive.

MODULE 4: LEADING ORGANISATIONAL CHANGE

Managing change in an organisation is not the sole responsibility of the leaders but everyone in the organisation. Yet, organisations struggle to get its members excited and involved in the change initiatives. In this module, learners will be introduced to a social constructionist approach to change which accentuates the positive as the negatives are recognised. Such an approach to change would include and involve all members of the organisation from inception to implementation.

- Learning the difference between diagnostic change vs dialogic change
- Learning to differentiate task-centred change and people-centred change
- Learning to use the Social Constructivist intervention method

- Contribute positively to organisational initiatives through the effective planning and implementation

Assessments:

- Attendance and participation

MODULE 5: ORGANISATIONAL WELLBEING

Wellbeing is an integral part of an organisation's culture. Your employees are your assets and contribute to the growth and success of your organisation. Organisational wellbeing is an often misunderstood concept. Many link it to wellness but wellness is a small fraction of wellbeing. Wellbeing is not confined to the absence of sick leave or retention of staff or employee assistance programmes but the presence of wellbeing and happiness. It has to be part of the company's culture and ingrained into its policies. It is part of corporate responsibility and strongly linked to the company's brand.

Organisational Integrated Wellbeing Model (OIWM) adheres to all possible levels of employee and organisational experience from the mind to the body and the environment. Learn how to do a comprehensive evaluation of the organisation's wellbeing initiatives and implement policies, processes and programmes that enhance the organisation's wellbeing. Wellbeing then becomes part of the DNA of the organisation, to invest and sustain a culture that promotes organisational wellbeing while deepening the connection between employees and organisations.

Learning Objectives:

- To compare and contrast between a wellbeing vs a wellness programme
- To understand what constitutes organisational wellbeing
- Signs and symptoms of organisational wellbeing vs illness
- To articulate how wellbeing is linked to happiness, health, relationships, performance and productivity
- To understand and apply the five key principles of OIWM and elements of wellbeing to teams and organisations
- To know the tools and strategies to enhance wellbeing at workplace
- To recommend and create action plans to implement changes in organisations towards organisational and personal wellbeing using the OIWM framework.
- To create individualised action plans for personal wellbeing using the OIWM framework.
- To create wellbeing ambassadors at workplace
